Do you own a HISTORIC HOME in the Pacific Northwest? Did you know that “historic” is defined as resources that are at least 50 years old? That means, if you live in a home built prior to 1975, it would be considered historic!

Many of us have wondered about the histories of our houses – Who built it? Who were the first owners? What was my city and neighborhood like at that time? Did anybody notable live in my home? What did it look like when it was built?

Pacific Northwest House Histories

Let us do the research for you! We are Willamette Cultural Resources Associates, Ltd. (WillametteCRA) - a cultural resource management firm founded in 2007 with offices in Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland. Our architectural historians, archaeologists, and anthropologists offer consulting services on public and private projects, with the ultimate goal of preserving our shared cultural heritage, whether below-ground or above-ground.

WillametteCRA's Seattle office, located in the Georgetown neighborhood, is staffed by professionals who have a deep understanding of local Northwest histories and who have a passion for conducting archival research and field studies.

We would love to assist you in learning more about your home or property – please contact us to learn more about our services!
